

If you are injured or ill, the First Aid Attendant in this workplace is:

To contact the First Aid Attendant:

The first aid kit is located in:

The First Aid Attendant (FAA) is authorised to take complete charge of all first aid treatment of an injured worker until the place of medical treatment has been reached, the worker has been passed to the care of an ambulance service, or responsibility for treatment has been accepted by someone with a higher level of certification or medical authority.

Decisions of the FAA must not be overruled, except by these persons.

The FAA may not refer the worker back to work unless satisfied that the first aid treatment is complete.

The FAA may not overrule the worker's choice in seeking medical attention.

The employer is responsible for reporting injuries promptly as required.